Tilden did not extend himself in his match against Flaquer, not playing his usual aggressive tennis. His opponent was consistently steady throughout the match, but earned very few points, all the games won by Flaquer being the result of Tilden's errors, the world's grass court champion running into a streak of petting at one point and also streak of netting at one point and also frequently hitting outside. In the last set, with Tilden leading, five games to three, he made a succession of errors which enabled the Span set by superior placing and court strategy when forced to exert himself. Tilden Wins With Ease

The large crowd of spectators, with the exception of the Americans, seemed to favor the Spaniard after the first set, which Tilden won with consummate ease, cheering Flaquer each time a point was scored for him. Some criticism was also heard of Tilden, the complaint being that he was not ex-

THERE is no question of Western gameness. Five times since 1913 be put on at 3 p. m.

California has come East to contest the field with the East. At last the effort has been crowned with success. And the end is not yet.

There is a California crew loitering in these parts which is quite as determined to sweep the Hudson at Poughkeepsie. Those who saw California at Poughkeepsie several years ago will not be surprised if another title goes West. Hard pressed for funds and equipment, without proper facilities for training and instruction, the Californians nevertheless rowed one of the most courageous races ever seen in the East. And it is true they had to sell their shells to help defray traveling expenses home.

If that is the plan, Dempsey would be sent into the pit at Thirty Acres prepared to travel at top speed from the first gong and finish Carpentier early. Failing in this, Hayes doubtless figures the titleholder is sufficiently sturdy to take punishment from Car-pentier for a few rounds and then come back late in the fight, as he did

There is no doubt that Dempsey can bit much harder than Carpentier and for that reason the challenger will have to occupy a lot of his time figuring how to keep out of reach, especially if he fails in his first onslaught. If Georges finds he can hit Dempsey at will, he is very apt to pick out some vital spot and play a tattoo there. He is a very accurate hitter and the combined force of several blows to the same locality would counterbalance the handicap Dempsey holds in the power of one punch.

The air of victory pervades the Dempsey stronghold. Hundreds of letters received daily are addressed only and Uncle Sam delivers them forthwith to the headquarters established by
